CHRIS PAGETT

Chris Pagett spent his childhood in Latin America and the Caribbean, was educated at Downside School and read modern languages at St Catherine's College, Oxford. Following two years with Jardine Matheson in Hong Kong, he joined the British Foreign Office in 1975 and served there for 32 years. His career took him to Asia, Latin America, Africa, Eastern Europe and the UN Security Council in New York. His various assignments included the Lancaster House conference and subsequent transition from Rhodesia to Zimbabwe, the Mozambican peace process, negotiations with the Chinese government on the future of Hong Kong, the Balkans conflicts, the Indo-Pakistan crisis and overseeing British engagement with Afghanistan in the aftermath of the Taliban.

Chris joined HSBC in 2007 where he currently serves as the Group's Head of Financial Crime and Geo-political risk.
